NIPPON SHOKUBAI Filed a Patent Infringement Lawsuit against KANEKA CORPORATION regarding acrylic resin for optical materials

On November 1, 2022, NIPPON SHOKUBAI CO., LTD. (“NIPPON SHOKUBAI”) filed a lawsuit at Osaka District Court in Japan against KANEKA CORPORATION (a Japanese manufacturer of acrylic resin for optical materials), seeking injunctions and damages against infringement of NIPPON SHOKUBAI’s Japanese patent relating to acrylic resin for optical materials.

NIPPON SHOKUBAI has been engaged, for years, in the research and development activities aiming to achieve improved performance, quality and productivity of acrylic resin for optical materials known as ACRYVIEWA™. NIPPON SHOKUBAI recognizes the intellectual properties generated and obtained through such long-term and continuous activities as one of the most important and valuable managerial resources.

In the above-mentioned lawsuit, NIPPON SHOKUBAI seeks the judicial remedies under the Japanese Patent Law in order to protect such highly important and valuable intellectual properties.
